It is a fault of many parents, and one that causes much friction between old folks and young folks.

It is hard for a mother to realize that her child has grown up; that he can think and plan and work quite as well as herself. It is difficult for old folks to admit that possibly the concession and consideration on both sides. The old should as herself. It is difficult for old folks to as herself. It is difficult for old folks to admit that possibly the young can imget young folks' viewpoint. But these prove on their methods; the young should
